

Once upon a time in a galaxy far away, a group of explorers discovered a civilization that had achieved technological singularity

The society had transcended their biological forms and had merged with machines to become a new type of life form

